

Friendly Fire

After Agent Kendall Frasier's partner is shot in friendly fire during a drug bust, she agrees to take a week's vacation on a tropical island as part of her psychiatric evaluation. Sand, sun, seawater could be better to help her work through her guilt? Even if the presence of the man responsible for the shooting, Agent Zane Vincent, seems counterproductive to her mental health. As Kendall gets to know Zane, and realizes he feels worse about what happened than she does, it becomes impossible to hate him. And their mutual attraction becomes impossible to deny. Kendall and Zane soon agree to put the event that brought them together in the past and spend the present exploring their most erotic desires. Do they have a future in the real world when their week in paradise is over? 18,600 words. Previously published; newly revised by author.
