Stephanie Richards is a single parent juggling her life to bring up her four-year-old daughter, hold down a full-time job as head waitress at the family restaurant -- and finalise her divorce from her violent, unscrupulous husband. Paul Hamilton is a burnt-out derivatives broker recuperating from a bout of pneumonia and the strain of maintaining the expensive lifestyle his family seems to demand. They meet on an empty winter beach in out-of-season Montauk, and the instant attraction they experience is strengthened by the discovery that they have much in common.
